Portland Harbor Clean-up

To: ☐ HarborComments

Dear EPA and to whom it may concern:

It has taken far too long to come up with the draft of a clean-up plan but now that it has been written, I think it is deficient for several reasons:

- 1) The draft plan will take far too long to have any measurable effect on the river environment.
- 2) The draft plan adopts a policy that relies far too much on the river cleaning itself.
- 3) The draft plan leaves those people who eat fish taken from the river in a state of limbo concerning their health.
- 4) The draft plan does not recognize that toxic waste sediments must be removed from the river and taken to an off site disposal ground.
- 5) The clean up costs must be partially accepted by the parties who created the problem in the first place.
- 6) The plan must be careful not to endanger any further our already endangered Willamette River salmon and steelhead populations.

Sincerely yours,
